

End User Licence Agreement

ShipAI — last updated 27 September 2026

1. Grant of licence

Subject to payment and to these terms, ShipAI grants you a perpetual, worldwide, non-exclusive, non-transferable licence to use, copy, modify and compile the source code supplied as part of the product you purchased, for your own personal and commercial software development.

2. Permitted use

- Use the code in your own private and commercial projects, including client work.
- Modify, extend and adapt the code without restriction.
- Ship compiled or derived software to your own users.

3. Prohibited use

- Reselling, sublicensing or redistributing the source code, in whole or in substantial part, as a template, boilerplate, starter kit or competing product.
- Publishing the source code publicly, including on public repositories, in whole or in substantial part.
- Removing or altering copyright, licence or attribution notices.
- Using the code for unlawful purposes or in violation of any applicable export control.

4. Ownership

All intellectual property rights in the products remain with ShipAI. This licence transfers no ownership. You receive the right to use the code, not the copyright in it.

5. Third-party components

The products may include or depend on third-party open source components governed by their own licences. Where those licences impose conditions, they apply to those components and take precedence for them. It is your responsibility to review the dependencies of any product before commercial use.

6. No warranty

Products are licensed as-is. ShipAI gives no warranty, express or implied, including merchantability or fitness for a particular purpose.

7. Limitation of liability

To the maximum extent permitted by law, ShipAI is not liable for indirect, incidental or consequential damages arising from use of the products. Total liability is limited to the amount paid for the product.

8. Termination

This licence terminates automatically if you breach clauses 2 or 3. On termination you must stop using the code and destroy all copies.

9. Governing terms

This agreement is governed by the laws applicable at ShipAI's principal place of business, without regard to conflict of law rules.
